

Biotechnology A2M Scholars Program

Accelerate your path from an associate to a master's degree in biotechnology.

What is the Biotech A2M Scholars Program?

The Biotech Associate to Master's (A2M) Scholars Program is a scholarship program for biotechnology students. It's made possible through a National Science Foundation (NSF) grant awarded to Northeastern University and Middlesex Community College. The grant provides qualifying students with scholarships of up to $10,000 per student, per year from their associate, bachelor's, and master's degree in biotechnology.

Along with financial assistance, textbooks, computers and transportation costs, the program also provides students like you with personalized support. This includes an A2M biotech navigator, tutoring, and a course roadmap to prepare for academic success and careers in biotechnology.

Benefits of Biotech A2M Scholars Program

- » Scholarships of up to $10,000 per student, per year
- » Dedicated A2M support team to help you every step of the way
- » Supplied laptops and textbooks—at no cost—as well as assistance with transportation and tutoring costs, if you qualify
- » Pathway to Northeastern's accelerated PlusOne Master's degree program in biotechnology (up to 16 credits count toward a B.S. and M.S. at no additional cost)
- » B.S. and M.S. from top-ranked university
- » Increased lifetime earning potential from advanced degrees—60% higher earning potential with a M.S. vs. A.S.
